

Focused on Aging

This five year traditional grant, 2005-2010, was funded to promote the health and welfare of the mature individual and to increase knowledge about the biological aspects of aging by encouraging and promoting scientific research and educational opportunities in the field. AFAR is the only organization supporting education and research in aging through fellowships to graduate (MD, Ph.D., DDS, DVM) and undergraduate students. This grant is seeking to build interest for student to work with geriatric patients in the future. The grant established fellowships and conducted several large symposiums related to education and research in aging.