

Breaking the Code: The Augustine Project

Patrick Beaver Learning Resource Center's Hickory Augustine Literacy Project provides individualized tutoring to low-income children who are reading at least one year below grade level. Students who receive this tutoring make significant gains in their reading, writing and spelling abilities within one year. The organization requests funding to increase the number of tutors and provide them training, and create a more robust data management and referral system.